GameStop Soars Following RoaringKitty Livestream Announcement

While the broader market awaits Friday's US Nonfarm Payrolls report for May, retail is entirely focused on a separate happening. That would be Gill, aka Roaring Kitty or DeepFuckingValue on social media, providing evidence that he will rally the GME faithful by holding a YouTube livestream on Friday, June 7.

Keith Gill, RoaringKitty's real identity, is one of the main figures behind the GameStop stock price leap in 2020. The livestream notification boosted a daily growth of 47.5% on GME stock, now priced at $46.55 each. As a result, Gill's position in GME stocks is now worth over $586 million.

The livestream is scheduled for 12:00pm EST or 16:00 GMT based on a screenshot he shared. The internet is rife with speculation that Gill will use the livestream to exercise his call options. His options are worth somewhere close to $730 million based on the afterhours share price. His 5 million shares are worth somewhere in the vicinity of $300 million.

As GameStop's stock price rally attracted more attention, Solana-based meme token GME, inspired by GameStop but not affiliated with the company, surged over 118% in the past 24 hours, according to CoinGecko data.

What is GameStop (GME)?

GME is a Solana-based meme coin created as a tribute to the popular GameStop meme stock event in 2021 based on information from GeckoTerminal. GME embodies the essence of the historic revolt against the financial giant. Like any other meme coin, GME was created without any intent of blue-chip utilities.

Just like most meme coins, GME has a low-entry barrier. Users don't need to do extensive investment research, and just have to buy into the coin because it has a fun community. GME adopts the slogan 'we love the coin' a pluralized form of the phrase used first by Keith Gill and popularized by the 'degenerates' who championed the GameStop fiasco.

GME draws its popularity from the original GameStop story and the community members that have shown support for the meme coin across social media channels and other media. The GameStop meme coin community has grown to thousands of followers on social media and on the project's Telegram community.

GME has seen significant success in the goal of community-building, another important contributor to its popularity is the meme coin boom sustained on the Solana network.

On the back of the GME stock price rally, GameStop (GME) meme coin is gaining growing popularity.

It should be noted that GME meme coin has no ties to the actual GameStop stock
