Latest News & Updates on TrumpCoin (DJT)

The US Presidential Election is continuing to exert a profound influence on the PoliFi meme coin sector, and in the latest pump, a new token called DJT—supposedly backed by Donald Trump himself—has become one of the most controversial gainers in recent times.

The DJT token, featuring imagery of former U.S. President Donald Trump, has witnessed price explosion in June 19. Notably, DJT token goes viral and sparked speculation about its origins.

Previously, there is a rumor that the rally in the price of DJT is purported by its link to Donald Trump, the presumptive Republican candidate in a third consecutive presidential election.

However, the mystery surrounding the origins of the viral Trump-themed DJT token on Solana may have been finally solved.

On a post on X, ZachXBT stated that Shkreli directly messaged him, claiming he had over 1,000 pieces of evidence proving he co-created DJT along with someone named “Barron,” potentially referring to Barron Trump - Donald Trump’s youngest son.

The announcement from Shkreli came shortly after ZachXBT publicly applied for the $150,000 bounty from blockchain data platform Arkham to identify DJT's true creator.

ZachXBT provided further on-chain evidence allegedly linking Shkreli to DJT. He highlighted a wallet holding a large DJT stake that sold off $832,000 tokens for the USDC stablecoin. Notably, this same wallet also held tokens from Shkreli's Shoggoth.ai project.

Before his exposure, Shkreli had firmly believed that DJT was the official cryptocurrency of the Trump campaign. He even proposed a wager with a pseudonymous crypto expert regarding the token's authenticity and origin. Regarding to Shkreli's exposure, Donald Trump's campaign kept its silence on the DJT token.
